About this list

A radical is a component that many Chinese characters are built from. Dictionaries have traditionally sorted characters by their radical, and the same components often hint at a character's meaning. The traditional system, from the Kangxi Dictionary, has 214 radicals, arranged by number of strokes — the order used on the following pages.

How to read the list. Radical is the standard form. Variants shows the alternate forms the radical takes when it appears inside other characters, or its simplified form. Tick the box beside each radical once you recognize it.
